NARCOTICS REPORT

The National Drug Enforcement Board (NDEB) will next meet on 7 August. At that time, the DCI will give a Worldwide Narcotics Threat Assessment. One of the other principal topics for discussion will be the question of staffing. At the present time, the staff director of the NDEB is Mr. Pat Tarr from DEA. He is new and looking for ideas and, more importantly, for detailees. The Attorney General has confided that he expects that these detailees will become the nucleus of a permanent staff. At present, the staff is composed of DoJ, FBI, and DEA cadre and the principal focus has been on domestic narcotics policy. Other issues also on the agenda for 7 August include:

- 1) Crisis management of narcotics policy issues, with most thinking apparently leaning toward the State Department as the focal point for any such structure
- 2) A range of issues concerning the domestic cultivation of marijuana and proposals for eradication. This is a major policy concern and the NDEB apparently is considering a new approach to this problem, including a new PR approach.
- 3) A new approach to the drug statistic issue (double and triple counting of drug seizures by the separate law enforcement agencies has skewed any accurate accounting system) Current thinking is to adopt a new ADP system by which each seizure by an individual law enforcement agency will be given a tag number and fed into a new interagency data base.

Although the principal focus of the NDEB has been on the domestic side of the narcotics issue, there appears to be little doubt that this will be changing soon and that there will be more pressure on the Intelligence Community to detail personnel to the NDEB to deal with foreign aspects of the problem.

PREFACE

The Critical Intelligence Problems Committee (CIPC) Study, International Narcotics Coordination and Collection, was promulgated by the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) and the National Foreign Intelligence Council with the requirement for the CIPC to review and report within six to 12 months on the status of implementing the recommendations contained in the International Narcotics Study.

This report summarizes and documents the actions which have been put into effect or are in the process of being implemented. The Intelligence Community's capability to address the international narcotics problem has significantly improved during the past 12 months. The very existence of a viable narcotics intelligence community today is due in large measure to the heightened awareness by Community principals of the gravity of the narcotics threat to the US. We believe that the Community's commitment to implement the recommendations contained in the International Narcotics Study is a major factor in this improved intelligence posture.

The magnitude and dynamic nature of the narcotics intelligence target is such, however, that the Community will continue to be confronted with difficult and complex tasks in fulfilling its narcotics mission. These issues are discussed in "The Challenge Ahead" section of this report.
